DIVICH TRADING SETUP First of all, you need to find a divergence setup in a time frame that you are comfortable with trading in (based on beinf a scalp trader or a swing trader).

0.1 Finding divergence setup

After finding the suitable divergence setup, we have to chose a target. Choosing the target is again based on the fact that you are a scalp or swing trader. Normally, the height between the diverged points is a trust worthy target.

0.2 Entering a trade

After finding the suitable divergence setup, checkout the Ichimoku indicator. Whenever you get the buy signal from the Ichimoku indicator, you have to wait for the signal to confirm. That works by waiting for the candel to to be closed above the signal area and after that you have to calculate your reward to risk based on the arranged target and then if everything looks fine, you can enter the market. If you can constantly watch the trade, you can wait for Ichimoku to give you a sell signal and sell whenever it confirms. In this case, you can wach the trade again and wait for another buy signal confirmed with Ichimoku and in this way you can go for the main target and you may gain more that going staight to the target.
